

Why Finance Your Equipment

The strategic advantages of financing perimeter security equipment

Don't let upfront costs hold your organization back. In 2026, nearly 8 in 10 companies use financing to acquire equipment — turning a major capital expense into an affordable, strategic monthly operating expense.

Financing isn't just about paying over time. It's about optimizing your cash flow, staying current with the latest technology, and maximizing your tax savings.

Purchasing through the GSA Schedule

1 Preserve working capital & cash flow

Instead of depleting cash reserves, financing keeps your liquidity high so you can invest in inventory, marketing, or staffing.

- Predictable monthly payments
- 100% financing, no down payment

2 Maximize Section 179 tax deductions

Deduct the full purchase price of qualifying equipment in the year acquired — even before it's fully paid off.

- Section 179 deduction up to 2026 limits
- Interest deduction available in many cases

3 Avoid technological obsolescence

Don't get stuck with outdated equipment. Financing lets you upgrade to the latest perimeter security technology as your needs evolve and threat landscapes change.

4 Conserve existing credit lines

Keep your bank credit lines open and available for unexpected emergencies, expansion, or operational gaps — rather than tying them up in depreciating assets.

5 Gain a competitive edge

Speed up procurement. Fast approval times mean you can deploy the equipment needed to protect people, communities, and places sooner without budget delays.
